Trivia Recap

Congrats to Zac AJ for winning the last pinball trivia game. We had some very knowledgeable players, and Zac still dominated. Instead of the $12 he choose a 6-month subscription to Pin Headz! Thanks Zac! No trivia this month. But pinball trivia will return on Tuesday October 13th!

Deeproot has experienced some major setbacks. They originally planned on launching RAZA at the Texas Pinball Festival in 2018. Deeproot started planning their pinball division in 2015, but really didn't get started until 2017 when they hired designer John Popaduk (JP0P). Since then they have also hired Steven Bowden, Dennis Nordman, Barry Oursler, Jon Norris and others. They have a number of other pinball machines in various stages of production as well. This includes a version of JP0P's Magic Girl, Alice in Wonderland and several other games.

The Inner Game of Tennis

Why is a pinball zine talking about a book on tennis? Well, it's more about the mental game of tennis, which perfectly translates to other sports including pinball.

The inside flap of a book reads, The Inner Game of Tennis is a revolutionary program for overcoming the self-doubt, nervousness, and lapses of concentration that can keep a player from winning. Competitive pinball can be stressful. Will you rise to the challenge or choke under the pressure? This book might help you place higher in your next tournament.

Deeproot is a new pinball manufacturer based in San Antonio, Texas. TWIP (This Week in Pinball) recently announced that Deeproot would be FINALLY be releasing their first game Retro Atomic Zombieland (RAZA) later this month.
