Welcome to the dog days of August. My advice: stay inside and play pinball. Or set up some games w/o legs around your pool and play some swim up pinball. This month's Bonus Junk is a custom recipe card for pizza dough. The recipe was inspired by famous chef J. Kenji López-Alt. It's a thin crust recipe that I think is much easier than other pizza dough recipes. Let me know if anyone uses the recipe or has questions. And if you aren't already a subscriber please hit me up for the recipe!

The Abridged part 2 History of Bally

Bally's rapid expansion in the 1980s took its toll on Bally's finances which forced them to sell off some business lines including Six Flags and Bally/Midway which was acquired by rival Williams Electronics in 1988. Williams continued to use the Bally name for pinball games, until Williams's parent company WMS Industries ceased pinball production in 1999 after heavy losses with the Pinball 2000 failure.

WMS[®]

WMS Industries has licensed companies to use the rights to remanufacture existing Bally and Williams pinball machines. Since 2014, the license has been held by Planetary Pinball Supply. In 1993 the slot machine manufacturing division was spun off as Bally Gaming International, ending the company's involvement in manufacturing. In 1994 Bally changed it's name to Bally Entertainment to reflect it's focus on casino business. In 1996 Bally was acquired by Hilton Hotels for $3 billion dollars. After being shuffled around, Bally ended up owned by Eldorado Resorts which became Caesars Entertainment.
